We are South: Democracy Day

The College of Arts and Science along with the Office of Student Affairs is sponsoring a Teach-In on Friday, February 17, 2017, from 10:00 AM through 1:00 PM at the USA Student Center. The Teach-In will focus on democracy and its role in our academic community. All USA students, faculty, and staff members are invited to attend and to join what promises to be exciting conversations about democracy. A march on campus will follow the Teach-In.

Some of the topics explored in student-led and faculty-led round-table discussions include:

Globalization

Immigration

Democratic institutions

The US Bill of Rights

Diversity in a democratic society

Future Citizens: local, national, global

Science and democracy

Freedom of speech

Security and democracy

Un-written freedoms (right to privacy, the right to free movement)

Media and democracy

General Education and democracy

Students, faculty or staff members who are interested in participating in a round table discussion on any of these issues or other possible issues should contact either
