

Devan Rockwell

Devan Rockwell, PharmD, BCACP, serves as the Assistant Professor of the Pharmacology course in the Department of Physician Assistant Studies at the University of South Alabama. She joined the program in January of 2023 to bring her knowledge of clinical pharmacology to the program.

Dr. Rockwell received her degree in pharmacology from Auburn University Harrison College of Pharmacy in 2020. She then completed her PGY-1 at West Florida Hospital and PGY-2 at USA Family Medicine Clinic. She later received her Board Certification in Ambulatory Care Pharmacy in 2023. She enjoys bringing the knowledge of clinical pharmacy practice along with the application of analytical literature to future physician assistants.

Dr. Rockwell has an appreciation for medicine and promoting interdisciplinary collaboration to the program. She has served as a pharmacist in inpatient and outpatient settings, bringing this knowledge to the classroom and linking transitional care. As a pharmacist, she is interested in breaking down the differences in medications and promoting students' confidence in utilizing resources clinically.
