The newly-formed LOGOS STRING QUARTET embodies the energies and talents of four musicians from the LSU School of Music faculty. It is rare enough that four like-minded and spirited string players find themselves in the same place, let alone share the need and commitment to study this miraculous genre. Their collaboration is the result of a collective vision and understanding of the value of communication through this music. Rooted in friendship and mutual respect, the group’s formation seemed a natural and logical artistic imperative.

Logos hopes to ever-widen its outreach through performances in schools, institutions, concert halls and venues from here at home to the farthest reaches possible. Its members are all internationally acclaimed artists and teachers with diverse career backgrounds. Deeply devoted to education, all have, by whatever fate, found themselves at LSU in Baton Rouge where they share their ideas and inspiration with marvelous students from around the state, country, and world. The group considers itself fortunate to have such a backdrop for its work and play. They look forward to presenting programs from the enormous scope of literature for string quartet, both old and new.

Logos recently made its international debut, performing and giving master classes in conservatories and major philharmonic halls of Bucharest, Timisoara; Targu Mures, Craiova; and Iasi, Romania.
